President Says He Doesn't Expect Failure; Economic Pall Growing

NEW YORK, May 10—Adjured by President Roosevelt to find the road to early peace, Appalachian bituminous coal producers met once more today with mine union leaders in an attempt to end, in a matter of hours, the bitter controversy that has deadlocked the conferees for two months.

Grim and non-communicative, the subcommittees for each side filed into the conference room while throughout the country, far removed from their hotel meeting place, the economic pall stemming from their disagreement spread its mushroom growth with each passing hour.

John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers of America, absent when the meeting was called to order, entered the room forty minutes later.

The operators were present in full force when the meeting was called to order.

Following Request

Chairman W. L. Robinson, presiding at all joint sessions thus far, would say only that the conferees were being resumed "in line with the request of President Roosevelt" who yesterday, in a White House meeting with both sides, called for an early agreement.

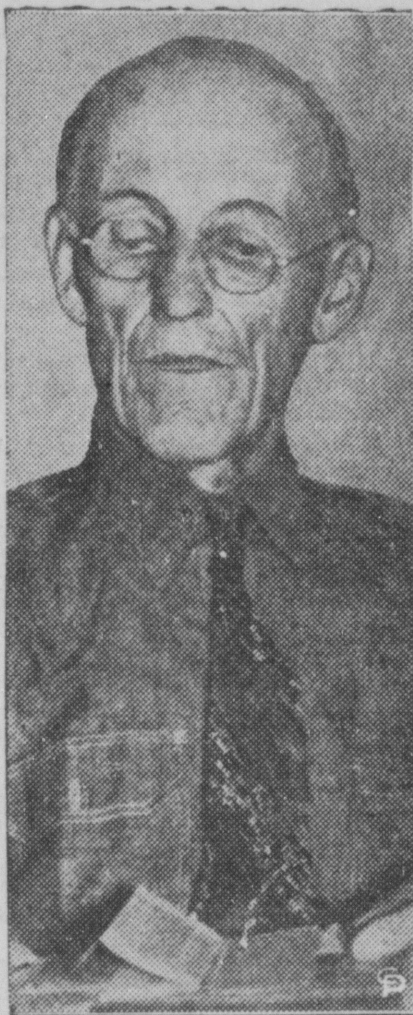

So far as could be learned, there was no specific peace proposal ready for presentation by either side. Dr. John R. Steelman, chief of the U. S. conciliation service, made no answer when reporters asked whether he, in his role of federal conciliator, had formulated any concrete suggestion on which agreement might be reached.

What the President sought was an industrial truce under which the nation's almost empty coal bins would be immediately refilled while the two warring factions continued their thus fruitless negotiations for a new labor contract for the industry.

Sternly counseling them that their obligations as American citizens transcended all others in importance, Mr. Roosevelt demanded of the operators and union leaders at a closed White House conference of an hour and 15 minutes yesterday that they remain

He's Ross?

IN AN unusual civil court suit at Phoenix, Ariz., a superior court jury rules that Gustav Blair, 69-year-old Phoenix carpenter, is the Charles Ross whose kidnapping in Germantown, Pa., 65 years ago shocked the nation. Blair filed the civil suit to establish his identity and asserted he was not seeking judgment to gain any inheritance or property rights. Charley Ross, then four, was kidnapped from the grounds of his parents' home in July, 1874, along with his brother Walter. The latter was released but $20,000 was demanded for Charles' return. His father offered to pay but not without delivery of the boy. The child never was returned. Lincoln C. Miller, of Phoenix, whose family reared Blair, testified his (Miller's) father had told him Blair was the kidnapped child.

PRESIDENT, SICK WITH HEAD COLD, STAYS IN HOUSE

WASHINGTON, May 10—A slight head cold, aggravated by recurring sinus trouble, kept President Roosevelt away from the executive offices today. He remained in his study in the private quarters of the White House.

The President's normally heavy calling list was confined to three scheduled visitors. Mr. Roosevelt occupied the morning in catching up with mail which has accumulated on his desk and the preparation of an address which he will make over the radio at 9:45 o'clock on the occasion of the dedication of a new building for the Museum of Modern Arts in New York City.

The chief executive was to receive Alexander W. Weddell, the new ambassador to Spain, in the afternoon to bid him farewell before sailing for Spain. Henry Luce, New York magazine publisher, was to be his luncheon guest and later Mr. Roosevelt planned to confer with Admiral Wilson Brown of the U. S. naval academy.

TAVERN BRAWL ENDS IN DEATH OF PARTICIPANT

COLUMBUS, May 10—Beaten, kicked and stomped on in north-side tavern brawl, Charles Rogers, 66, died in St. Francis Hospital in Columbus today. Detective Sgt. Charles Cole said second degree murder charges were filed against Virgil Miller, 24, whom Cole said instigated the fight.

Courthouse is Moved!

Don't Be Concerned, Though, Because Structure Being Hauled About Is A Replica And Not The Real Thing

Pickaway county's courthouse was to be moved temporarily Wednesday to E. Ohio street. The courthouse being "transplanted" happens to be the model of Pickaway county's first courthouse, constructed with funds provided by the Chamber of Commerce and displayed in the Northwest Territory celebration.

It has been in storage at the county's garage on W. High street. Robert G. Colville, director of the Pumpkin Show society, said the model had to be moved from the new garage building to permit some improvements. It was too large to be moved through one of the doors in the garage to another room so another storage location had to be found. Doors at the city building were too small to permit its transfer there and the city's garage is only large enough for the police cruiser.

Mr. Colville said the model will be moved to the garage on Ohio street until improvements are completed at the new garage building, then it will be returned there for storage.

Equipment of the Pickaway County Agricultural society, sponsors of the Pumpkin Show, will be kept stored in the new garage building.

Crew of 66 Saved As Freighter Sinks

MANILA, P. I., May 10—The 66 officers and crew of the British freighter Lindenbank, victims of the second Philippine shipwreck within a week, were brought to the Iloilo naval base near Manila today on board the U. S. destroyer Pope.

The survivors were rescued from life boats in the Sula sea several hours after the 5,000-ton vessel flashed two S.O.S. calls and plunged to the bottom off the treacherous Arena reef of Palawin island, 250 miles south of Manila. The entire crew escaped the sinking vessel without injury.

In the previous Philippine shipwreck, the Inter-island luxury liner Mayon, caught in the backlash of a typhoon last Friday, went aground south of Debu island with 186 passengers and a heavy cargo. All passengers and crew members were safely transferred to rescue ships.

The freighter Lindenbank, owned by the Bank Steamship line of London, was enroute from Australia to Shanghai with a cargo of wheat when she rammed the Arena reef. Freed by a rising tide, the vessel nosed into the sea and sank rapidly.

MAVERICK WINS MAYOR'S OFFICE IN SAN ANTONIO

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., May 10—Former Congressman Maury Maverick turned the tables on his old political foe today.

Maverick was elected mayor of San Antonio on the basis of almost complete returns over the incumbent C. K. Quinn who led the successful opposition to Maverick's bid for reelection to congress last fall.

The vote with only a few precincts missing gave, Maverick 18,375; Quinn, 14,874; Leroy Jeffers, former assistant district attorney, 11,503.

Maverick led his entire ticket into office. He is pledged to reduce the city tax rate and seek the establishment of the city manager form of government to eliminate "machine politics." He will be inducted into office in a month.

Maverick, running on a straight New Deal platform last fall, after a stormy stay in the nation's capital, was defeated by Paul Kilday, backed by the Quinn faction.

Philadelphia Detectives Say New Group Discovered During Inquiry

PHILADELPHIA, May 10—Not one, but two insurance-murder rings operated in Philadelphia, slaying victims in order to collect on their insurance and accounting for a suspected 100 hitherto unexplained deaths, detectives asserted today.

Disclosure that a second and more subtle ring existed in apparent competition with the notorious arsenic syndicate game, police said, following the confession of Mrs. Millie Jacobbe, 50-year-old widow, that a leader of the latter group poisoned her husband, Antonio, 51, in 1933.

The newly-discovered group, allegedly "selling" murder to its clients for a standard price, was said to have poisoned its victims by antimony, medically impossible to trace in post-mortem analysis.

Meanwhile, with an estimated 35 persons expected to be implicated in New Jersey in connection with the arsenic ring, police were puzzled by the death of Thomas Pino, 51, suspected of poisoning his first wife, Jennie several years ago. Price Declares Men Idle Through No Fault Of Their Own

COLUMBUS, May 10 — The United Mine Workers of America today laid plans to contest vigorously a decision which stands to cost members almost $3,000,000 in job insurance benefits.

There are approximately 30,000 union bituminous coal miners in Ohio, about two-thirds of whom were employed on March 31, when the work agreement expired and mining was suspended.

Herschel Atkinson, administrator of the Bureau of Unemployment Compensation, has ruled that a strike exists and that, therefore, those miners who laid down their picks on April 1, are ineligible to receive job insurance.

The Atkinson decision followed precedent set by the states of Kentucky and West Virginia. Two other bituminous coal producing states, Pennsylvania, the largest of all, and Tennessee, ruled to the contrary.

Price To Fight

With the decision thus standing three to two against them, the United Mine Workers, through John Price, spokesman for District Six with headquarters in Columbus, served notice that the union would exert every effort to upset the Ohio ruling.

"We think the ruling is wrong," said Price who is in charge of district offices while the president, John Owens, is in the East attending contract negotiations.

"We will appeal it direct to the review board. We contend that the miners are unemployed through no fault of their own."

"We wanted the operators to continue work under the old wage scale (the agreement which expired March 31) pending a settlement of the present dispute but they would not follow our suggestions."

While Atkinson was making up his mind whether a strike did or did not exist, the bureau had approved initial benefit payments to some 3,000 idle Ohio miners.

But due to the waiting period, the bureau explained, checks have not been mailed to any of those whose claims had been approved because the operators for whom they worked failed to contest payment. Stop orders have been issued against all approved claims.

All To Be Unpaid

If the Atkinson ruling is affirmed by the review board the claims of 13,820 miners which already have been received and those of some 1,200 others which are presumed to have been filed at branch offices will remain unpaid.

Since an unemployed worker whose claim is approved is allowed 16 weeks compensation of not to exceed $15 in any one year, this would mean a savings to the state of roughly $2,800,000.

Brown Says Statute To Protect Brokers And Cattle Users

COLUMBUS, May 10—On the basis of a unanimous agreement arrived at by all divergent interests during a conference with Director of Agriculture John T. Brown, the Department of Agriculture will enforce Amended House Bill No. 380. This act is designed to prevent spread of infectious and contagious diseases of live stock by requiring dealers, brokers and their agents to secure a live stock dealers' license from the Department of Agriculture; to bond the dealers, brokers and their agents, and to inspect and disinfect stock yards, pens and vehicles used in transportation of live stock.

Approximately 3,000 live stock dealers and brokers in Ohio are involved. They will be given ample notice of the date on which they must comply with provisions of the act or face prosecution. The deadline date will be announced as soon as the necessary new forms of application blanks, licenses, financial statements, bonds and bond trustee agreements can be drafted and printed.

Acting Chief Of Union To Ask Review; Compensation Funds Turned Down

COUNTY FARMER, SPORTSMAN UNIT PLANNING WORK

The Pickaway County Farmer's and Sportsman's association has set aside the afternoon and evening of May 24 for some manual labor at the canal.

The date was announced Wednesday as the day repairs will be made on the canal dam. Recent high water washed around one end of the dam necessitating extensive repairs.

The committee in charge of the work include B. F. Harden, A. H. Rodgers, Earl Smith, W. B. Cady and Bishop Given.

"We'll need lots of shovels and men to 'lean' on them for the work," Harry Bartholomew, secretary of the county organization, said.

SHIP CARRYING BRITAIN'S RULERS IN BAD WEATHER

ABOARD EMPRESS OF AUSTRALIA, At Sea, May 10—Despite stormy seas, the liner Empress of Australia held to a speed of about 17 knots today en route to Quebec, where King George VI and Queen Elizabeth will disembark for their tour of Canada and the United States.

Rough weather caused the ship to pitch last evening and forced cancellation of a motion picture performance for their majesties, who retired early.

Late yesterday afternoon the battle cruiser Repulse, which accompanied the Empress of Australia for the first part of the voyage, turned back toward England.

Penney's Features Employees' Day's With Sale

ASSOCIATES OF COMPANY OFFER MANY BARGAINS

An annual event which has always attracted an enthusiastic buying response in the J. C. Penney Co. store is "Employees' Days," being featured in the Circleville store this week.

During "Employees' Days" the store's associates take over the management and operation under the supervision of W. J. Raymann, assistant manager. Department heads and other employees join in working out a program for the event, while the manager, after a fashion, sits on the sidelines.

For "Employees' Days" the store's personnel has spent much time in planning and buying for this week's event, to make it one of the biggest ever. The regular standard of the Penney Co. merchandise has been maintained but special low prices are expected to attract a rush of business.

OFFICER, SHOT IN CHICAGO BY BANDITS, DIES

CHICAGO, May 10 — Policeman Philip Kelly, wounded twice in the stomach during a gun battle with bandits who attempted to hold up a crowded Chicago tavern last week, died early today.

He was the second victim of the shooting to succumb. Alex Ferguson, 55, an undertaker, was wounded in crossfire between Kelly, another officer and the gunmen, and died before he reached a hospital.

Kelly's death came only a few hours after the accused killers, Orville Watson, 29, and Edward Riley, 37, reenacted the crime in the tavern and were identified by eight witnesses. Both have signed confessions, according to police.

Policeman Edward McIntyre also was gravely wounded but is given a chance to recover. It is expected Watson and Riley, both ex-convicts from Michigan, will not be brought to trial until McIntyre has recovered sufficiently to testify against them. Also awaiting trial is 22-year-old Suzanna Smith, who police said, had been living with Watson and fled with the two men to Detroit after the gun battle.

The trio was captured just outside Detroit some 36 hours after the shooting.

with complacency upon Hitler's ambitions, actually had helped him wrench the Sudetenland away from Czechoslovakia, and taken a small piece itself.

But when the rest of Czechoslovakia went down the Nazi maw, the Poles suddenly woke up to find themselves surrounded by a long German border on the south where Czechoslovakia used to be. On the west they had always had Germany, and on the north was East Prussia.

Germany was on three sides. Only outlet to the outside world was through Polish Corridor and the Free City of Danzig.

Also the Poles began to find Nazi propaganda springing up among the Ukrainians in south-east Poland. This area borders on Slovakia, and has been much more accessible to agitators ever since Germany took all of Czechoslovakia.

So the Poles today are really worried about the pulling to pieces of their entire country — the Polish Corridor going to Germany, the Polish Ukraine to "Independent" Slovakia, and even eastern Poland to Russia, should that country right-about-face and line up with Germany.

If the Poles had stuck with Czechoslovakia instead of mobilizing against her last October it might have been different.

Two Oklahomans

The incident is being carefully guarded, but two prominent Oklahomans staged a sizzling verbal bout at the recent U. S. Chamber of Commerce banquet.

One was Frank Phillips, millionaire head of the Phillips Petroleum Co., who in the course of a scheduled speech bemoaned the fact that he had to give up residence in Oklahoma because of the state income tax.

"I love Oklahoma," he orated, "and I would like to live out my life there and be buried in its soil. But I can't afford it. The state income tax is driving me and others to seek residence elsewhere."

This drew a burst of consoling applause from his big business listeners. But there was one who did not cheer. George Key, wealthy toll bridge operator, who was not on the program, not only failed to applaud but he rose to his feet.

"I'm an Oklahoman, too," he told the startled throng, "and I, too, love my State. I love it so much that I am not afraid to live there and assume the responsibilities of citizenship and pay my taxes. I'm not running away because it costs me money. I'm an Oklahoman and I intend to live and die there."

The blunt blast apparently got under Phillip's skin. Springing to his feet, he declared, "I'm not shirking my responsibilities. All the money I saved by not living in Oklahoma I have given to Oklahoma charities."

Stalin and Litvinoff

Russia will always be an enigma, especially Russia under Stalin, but the facts surrounding the sudden retirement of Maxim Litvinoff as Foreign Commissar gradually are leaking out.

Stalin never doubted Litvinoff's loyalty, but long felt that his foreign minister had been somewhat contaminated by too much association in the parlors of Western European diplomacy. He had gone soft, was not hard-boiled enough to suit Stalin.

Also Litvinoff was a Jew, the last important Jew remaining in the Soviet high councils. Stalin, who is a Georgian, shares the general antipathy of his countrymen for that faith.

Finally, Litvinoff favored a security pact with Britain and France, even though that pact was not exactly as Russia wanted it. Stalin, on the other hand, wanted a hard-and-fast agreement which would give tangible support to the Soviet, especially in the Far East.

With a peasant's mind, the Russian dictator wanted benefits which were concrete, which he could feel. He wanted to know, among other things, how many ships Britain would have in the Pacific to aid Russia in case of war with Japan. So Stalin rejected Litvinoff's more platonic pact.

Litvinoff's resignation appears to indicate greater Russian isolation, but the net effect on future policy remains to be seen.

CONDEMNED MAN PENS PLEA FOR BETTER WORLD

COLUMBUS, May 10 — A plea for a more peaceful and sociable world was the message left behind today by Nick Babich, 54 Warren, who died in the electric chair at Ohio penitentiary last night for the butcher knife slaying of his wife and a neighbor.

A note, found in one of his pockets following the execution, read, in part:

"I feel sorry for committing this crime. I hope the people of the world, the poorer class especially, will try and make this a more peaceful and sociable world. I send my best regards to all Russian leaders and the same to President Roosevelt."

Unemployed and worried, Babich became enraged with his wife, Barbara last Dec. 4 following an argument over money. He hit her over the head with an ax, then ended her life with a knife. Rushing to the home of a neighbor, Dan Gross, whom he had accused of causing him the loss of his W.P.A.

job, Babich killed him with a razor. He was tried and convicted for Gross' death.

Babich was the 222nd person to die to Ohio's electric chair, and the first since it was moved back to the old death chamber in the southeast corner of the prison yard. It was taken out of the chapel building following a protest by Franklin county ministers.

SCANDINAVIANS TO BE NEUTRAL IN CASE OF WAR

Hitler's Request For Pact Brings Answer From Combined Nations

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, May 10—The four Scandinavian nations—Sweden, Denmark, Norway and Finland—served notice to the world today they will spurn German offers of non-aggression agreements designed to "immobilize" them in time of war.

Decision to spurn Chancellor Hitler's offers was reached by the foreign ministers of the four nations at a meeting in Stockholm. Rejection of the proffered pacts was announced in an official communique. In addition, the Scandinavian statesmen agreed to keep their nations clear of any entanglement with Europe's armed groups of nations, and reaffirmed their determination to remain neutral in the event of a European war.

(Background note: In addition to offering non-aggression pacts to the Scandinavian countries, Hitler advanced offers to Latvia and Estonia. Both Baltic nations agreed to negotiate non-aggression agreements with Germany. Lithuania, the third small Baltic state, already has a similar agreement with the Reich.)

Action of the four northern nations in turning down Hitler's offer was interpreted as torpedoing a move which might have brought any one or all of the four nations within the scope of Rome-Berlin diplomacy.

Influence Blocked

Furthermore, the decision blocked an apparent German plan to bring the Scandinavians squarely under German influence—that is, to "neutralize" or "immobilize" them from the German point of view—in the event of a European conflict.

As it is, the Scandinavian nations plan, should war break out, to maintain strict neutrality on their own volition without falling under the aegis of either one side or the other.

The four foreign ministers met in Stockholm for the express purpose of reaching a joint decision regarding the German offers, which apparently were inspired by President Roosevelt's recent peace plea to Hitler, asking the Reichsfuehrer to guarantee the nations of Europe for a period of 10 to 25 years. Sweden, Denmark, Norway and Finland were among the nations specifically named by the American president.

1938 Pact Noted

The communique said the four nations had agreed to adhere to the Oslo declaration of 1938, which provides that the "northern countries should remain outside all groups of powers that may be formed in Europe, and in the event of war will do everything possible to avoid being involved."

Political combinations by any one or by all of the four countries with other powers are "impossible," the announcement added.

Dewey declined to reveal at whose request the investigation was undertaken.

high authority, has the "full support" of the Reich which regards the action of the Scandinavian governments as a "direct answer to President Roosevelt, which should demonstrate to him that European states know best how to shape their destinies."

Development Awaited

There were evidences of intensive diplomatic activity behind the scenes, but no indication was as yet forthcoming as to what can be expected to develop.

The only definite clue was a projected visit within the next few days of Field Marshal Hermann Goering to Generalissimo Francisco Franco designed, it is believed, to induce Spain to join the Italo-German military alliance.

Entry of Spain into that accord would strengthen Premier Mussolini's hand in dealing with France which would find herself with an ideological enemy on her Western frontier as well as on the East.

Furthermore such an alliance might give Germany and Italy the use of Spain's strategic naval coasts for potential operation against France and Britain in the event of war.

Italo-German basic objection to conferences of a "collective" nature was advanced as the fundamental reason for expected collapse of the proposed peace conference. The possibility of a German formal reply to the Holy See, however, was not yet dead.

While the nation awaited an official decision, the German press renewed its attacks against Poland.

The German official news agency DNB, charged that Polish authorities expelled 180 minority Germans in the last 24 hours, increasing the total to 500.

HOWARD CALLS FOR FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., May 10—The free press was envisioned today by Roy W. Howard, New York newspaper editor, as the refuge and champion of American democracy.

In the tenth annual Don Mellett memorial lecture at Stanford university, Howard urged: "Permit no force to undermine it (American journalism) or abridge its freedom, for when its freedom is abridged, or ended, so also will be yours. Ended also will be this democracy of ours which, with all its shortcomings, is still the freest and the most enlightened government that the mind of man has yet evolved."

The gathering of newspapermen, students and others was in honor of the late Don Mellett, Canton, Ohio, editor who was slain during an anti-vice campaign in his community.

Favorable weather conditions have resulted in work being speeded on the Route 22 road improvement, west of Circleville.

With favorable weather the remainder of the week practically all grading work, with the exception of that around concrete abutments, will be completed. Officials said the grading on the east end of the project is completed. The center fill will be finished by Thursday night. Several days will be required on the grading on the western end.

In the last 10 days the Lewis & Frisinger Co., contractors on the project, have employed an additional 25 workmen.

Approximately 200 feet of slab forms over the bridges have been finished and are ready for concrete pouring. Work is under way also on the construction of concrete spillways.

FARM NEWS

Brief Items of Interest to Pickaway Farmers

Succession plantings keep the garden producing longer, make the family meals tastier, and furnish vitamins which are just as beneficial as the ones sold in commercial preparations.

Payment to Ohio farmers under the 1938 federal farm program totaled $7,500,000 on May 1, with 6,000 applications for payment still waiting payment. Checks already had gone to 106,700 farmers in the state.

V. D. Burris agricultural agent in Medina county, says that the most neglected crop in Ohio is pasture and that it will markedly reduce production costs of meat and milk treatments of lime and fertilizer when needed.

Clean range is the best environment for growing pullets, and plenty of feed will mature the birds in time for the Fall and early Winter laying season when eggs are the best prices. Clean feed and water receptacles lessen the danger of disease and parasite infection.

Indications now are that the pigs produced this year will furnish enough pork to supply United States people with the same amount of pork as was available in the relatively prosperous years 1926-29, but this production will provide 700 million pounds of lard which will not be required for use in the country and for which a foreign market will be needed.

The United States foreign trade in eggs and egg products is relatively unimportant when compared to the value of production here. Imports in the past 10 years have never exceeded in value 1 percent of the value of the eggs produced at home. Egg imports were highest in 1929, with a value of $7,522,000, but our exports of eggs that year were valued at $4,143,000, and the total production here had a value of $935,533,000.

DECATUR, Ill., May 10—Thousands of boys and girls in Illinois are secretly members of a "Hitler Youth Organization" and pay homage to the German Fuehrer, it was charged today by William B. Soules, an official of the Boy Scouts.

Rejection of the proffered pact was announced in an official communique. In addition, the Scandinavian statesmen agreed to keep their nations clear of any entanglement with Europe's armed groups of nations, and reaffirmed their determination to remain neutral in the event of a European war.

(Background note: In addition to offering non-aggression pacts to the Scandinavian countries, Hitler advanced offers to Latvia and Estonia. Both Baltic nations agreed to negotiate non-aggression agreements with Germany. Lithuania, the third small Baltic state, already has a similar agreement with the Reich.)

Action of the four northern nations in turning down Hitler's offer was interpreted as torpedoing a move which might have brought any one or all of the four nations within the scope of Rome-Berlin diplomacy.

Influence Blocked

Furthermore, the decision blocked an apparent German plan to bring the Scandinavians squarely under German influence—that is, to "neutralize" or "immobilize" them from the German point of view—in the event of a European conflict.

As it is, the Scandinavian nations plan, should war break out, to maintain strict neutrality on their own volition without falling under the aegis of either one side or the other.

The four foreign ministers met in Stockholm for the express purpose of reaching a joint decision regarding the German offers, which apparently were inspired by President Roosevelt's recent peace plea to Hitler, asking the Reichsfuehrer to guarantee the nations of Europe for a period of 10 to 25 years. Sweden, Denmark, Norway and Finland were among the nations specifically named by the American president.

1938 Pact Noted

The communique said the four nations had agreed to adhere to the Oslo declaration of 1938, which provides that the "northern countries should remain outside all groups of powers that may be formed in Europe, and in the event of war will do everything possible to avoid being involved."

Political combinations by any one or by all of the four countries with other powers are "impossible," the announcement added.

Development Awaited

There were evidences of intensive diplomatic activity behind the scenes, but no indication was as yet forthcoming as to what can be expected to develop.

The only definite clue was a projected visit within the next few days of Field Marshal Hermann Goering to Generalissimo Francisco Franco designed, it is believed, to induce Spain to join the Italo-German military alliance.

Entry of Spain into that accord would strengthen Premier Mussolini's hand in dealing with France which would find herself with an ideological enemy on her Western frontier as well as on the East.

Furthermore such an alliance might give Germany and Italy the use of Spain's strategic naval coasts for potential operation against France and Britain in the event of war.

Italo-German basic objection to conferences of a "collective" nature was advanced as the fundamental reason for expected collapse of the proposed peace conference. The possibility of a German formal reply to the Holy See, however, was not yet decided. While the nation awaited an official decision, the German press renewed its attacks against Poland.

The German official news agency DNB, charged that Polish authorities expelled 180 minority Germans in the last 24 hours, increasing the total to 500.

HOWARD CALLS FOR FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., May 10—The free press was envisioned today by Roy W. Howard, New York newspaper editor, as the refuge and champion of American democracy.

In the tenth annual Don Mellett memorial lecture at Stanford university, Howard urged:

"Permit no force to undermine it (American journalism) or abridge its freedom, for when its freedom is abridged, or ended, so also will be yours. Ended also will be this democracy of ours which, with all its shortcomings, is still the freest and the most enlightened government that the mind of man has yet evolved."

The gathering of newspapermen, students and others was in honor of the late Don Mellett, Canton, Ohio, editor who was slain during an anti-vice campaign in his community.

FARM NEWS

Brief Items of Interest to Pickaway Farmers

Succession plantings keep the garden producing longer, make the family meals tastier, and furnish vitamins which are just as beneficial as the ones sold in commercial preparations.

Payment to Ohio farmers under the 1938 federal farm program totaled $7,500,000 on May 1, with 6,000 applications for payment still waiting payment. Checks already had gone to 106,700 farmers in the state.

V. D. Burris agricultural agent in Medina county, says that the most neglected crop in Ohio is pasture and that it will markedly reduce production costs of meat and milk treatments of lime and fertilizer when needed.

Clean range is the best environment for growing pullets, and plenty of feed will mature the birds in time for the Fall and early Winter laying season when eggs are the best prices. Clean feed and water receptacles lessen the danger of disease and parasite infection.

Indications now are that the pigs produced this year will furnish enough pork to supply United States people with the same amount of pork as was available in the relatively prosperous years 1926-29, but this production will provide 700 million pounds of lard which will not be required for use in the country and for which a foreign market will be needed.

The United States foreign trade in eggs and egg products is relatively unimportant when compared to the value of production

here. Imports in the past 10 years have never exceeded in value 1 percent of the value of the eggs produced at home. Egg imports were highest in 1929, with a value of $7,522,000, but our exports of eggs that year were valued at $4,143,000, and the total production here had a value of $935,538,000.

BRICKER FACES ANOTHER TEST IN LEVY VOTE

Means Of Obtaining Money To Match Relief Fund Being Considered

SPECIAL ELECTION LOOMS

Appropriation Bill Booked For Return Friday For Deciding Ballot

COLUMBUS, May 10.—Strength of the Bricker administration in the house may get its severest test today when members vote on a bill to reduce the 65 percent majority vote for special levies on real estate as a means of raising relief matching money.

House leaders were confident that a majority of the Republican-controlled house would favor the measure, but they were not so sure the emergency clause would carry.

If the emergency clause, which would make the bill effective immediately after passage, is defeated, it would mean a special election on levies, while if the members favor the clause a vote on levies could be held at the primary Aug. 8.

$20,000 Item Stressed

It will be pointed out on the floor that a special election would necessitate the expenditure of about $20,000, the house leadership said, and that the emergency provision would save such an expense.

The bill would limit the levy to one and one-half mills and provide a majority vote in 1939, a 55 percent vote in 1940 and reversion to the 65 percent majority in 1941.

Meanwhile, the house finance committee planned to vote today on an amendment to the general appropriation bill which would slice nearly three percent from the personal service item in the budget as a means of providing $500,000 additional for relief.

The possibility was seen that layoffs and payless vacations might result and that between 250 and 300 persons would lose their state jobs.

The appropriation bill was re-submitted to the finance committee to allow the cut to be made and will be back in the house for a vote Friday, Republican Majority Leader J. Harry McGreagor said.

Ballard Move Fails

Rep. Paul Ballard (R-Jackson) attempted to prevent the state from paying $2,000,000 for the biennium to the public employees retirement fund by introducing an amendment deleting it from the budget, but the move failed.

The committee voted in favor of the amendment, then adopted an amendment setting up the fund in a separate account.

"My amendment will be offered on the floor of the house," Ballard said. "These state employees have been protected all through the depression and it's time we started thinking more about indigent persons."

The administration section of the poor relief bill was sent to the house welfare committee immediately after its introduction yesterday and will be ready for a vote when the financial section is added.

A bill setting up an Ohio River valley sanitation commission to cooperate with seven other states in ridding rivers of pollution was recommended for passage by the house judiciary committee.

Another measure preventing the department of health from regulating drainage from coal mines also was reported out by the committee.

It was opposition to the regulation of such drainage which held up the sanitation commission bill in the senate. It finally was approved by the upper house.

The administration suffered a setback when the house tabled a bill to regulate the jurisdiction of courts in issuing injunctions arising from labor disputes and labor received a slap when a motion to relieve the judiciary committee of a bill patterned after the Norris-LaGuardia injunction act failed to carry.

Commission Set Up

The senate approved a bill creating a seven member commission for state planning and research, and Sen. Leo Ascherman (R-Cleveland) its author, also introduced one making it a crime for anyone to wear uniforms representative of any foreign military organization.

Approval of the measure would mean that no so-called subversive groups could appear in uniforms.

There are too many Irish cows on the roads at night, motorists in Eire claim. They want the bosses to be outlined in lights, so they may readily be seen.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

America's most illustrious motive, the "J. W. Bowker," ran under its own power for the first time in years when Cecil De Mille succeeded in borrowing it for his new epic of the early railroads, "Union Pacific," opening locally next Sunday at the Cliftona theatre. Brought to the Paramount lot for the occasion, it attracted almost as much attention as the stars of the production, Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea.

Built in 1875 to serve the Comstock Lode country and owned by the Railways and Locomotive Historical Society since 1937, the wide-stacked woodburner was completely reconstructed by Paramount to meet Interstate Commerce Commission requirements.

The "Bowker," known and loved by all railway enthusiasts, was built in 1875 for the Virginia and Truckee Railway. It was purchased in 1896 by the Hobart Estate Company and operated at Hobart Mills, Calif. Presented by the Hobart Estate Company in 1937 to the Pacific Coast Chapter, Railways and Locomotive Historical Society, it has since become famous as the most illustrious survivor of a by-gone day in railroading.

No sevens for Tyrone since he started work on his thirteenth picture, "Rose of Washington Square," 20th Century-Fox production in which he is starred with Alice Faye and Al Jolson.

Shortly after shooting began on the film, which opens Sunday at the Grand theatre, Tyrone was:

Crowned "King of the Movies" in a nationwide newspaper poll. Granted a lease on a South Pacific island for a vacation home. Awarded the coveted co-star role opposite Sonja Henie in her next production.

Notified that his last three pictures—"In Old Chicago," "Alexander's Ragtime Band" and "Jesse James"—have been more popular at the world's boxoffices than any other three pictures made by a single Hollywood star.

"The Gentleman from Indiana"

BLUE RIBBON CONGRESSMAN

As I see it, the best job being done by any Republican office holder today is by a man with a future,—Joe Martin of Massachusetts. He is Minority Floor Leader in the House of Representatives. If the Republicans capture the House next year he is certain to become Speaker,—if he is in the House.

The opposition in the House these past six years was a sad affair. The vital spark was missing. The Republicans were few in number.

That is true. But there have been outnumbered outfits that made the bleachers howl as they went down to defeat. You have seen that kind on the football field, and in the prize ring. And there was the Alamo, and Custer's last stand. None such in Washington.

The minority now has a quarterback. Joe Martin shows signs of having that indefinable something without which everything is nothing. He has "it". Supplemented by new recruits from the November front, he has got the minority mouse to throw out its Congressional chest and say, "Where is that Democratic cat? Lead me to 'im".

Joe has the boys clicking. They go into a huddle and come out having notions of whither to wend. The bleachers are beginning to take notice. This is evidenced by the recent Life Magazine poll. Fifty-three Washington news hawks — the best in the country — voted for Joe as the blue ribbon Congressman. The score sheet was based on integrity, intelligence, industry, influence. Young men who want to get on in politics should study this carefully. The top places are never held long by the shyesters, drunkards or loafers.

It is a good thing to know. The same coin that bought success in the old days buys it now. Men must work. Their word must be good. No lasting success in politics without character. Nail that down. Joe had tough competition. I said that Joe was certain to be the next Speaker of the House if the G.O.P. gains enough seats. There is a chance that he will not. He may be somewhere else. He may be Speaker of the Senate — Vice President of these once United States. The G.O.P.'s could go much farther and do worse — a lot worse. Joe is not a Demos-thenes as a platform orator, nor does he have the famous Hahvahd accent. Someone once said that the difference between men and horses is that the latter have horse sense.

For example, Joe has been a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee. But strange to say, it didn't go to his head. Joe doesn't like foreign affairs, as practised. Joe would keep Uncle Sam out of all the foreign affairs if he possibly could. He would let foreigners run their own affairs. Out in my country there are a lot of folks who agree with Joe.

Another thing Joe Martin believes in is constitutional government. That makes him a reactionary with pinks. But I doubt if the pinks are going to elect the national ticket next year. He believes, too, that Congress should retain—and recover—its old time dignity as an equal branch of government. That makes him a heretic to the true faith in the eyes of certain worshippers along the Potomac. But as we witness the world balancing on the precipice of one-man government, a good many people are losing their admiration for it. Give them twelve months more and they may say, "Well, I guess Joe Martin and Hatton Sumners weren't so wrong after all".

I have been suggesting that the G.O.P.'s ought not to overlook Joe Martin for Vice President. But perhaps I ought to leave out the Vice!

BRICKER FACES ANOTHER TEST IN LEVY VOTE

Means Of Obtaining Money To Match Relief Fund Being Considered

SPECIAL ELECTION LOOMS

Appropriation Bill Booked For Return Friday For Deciding Ballot

COLUMBUS, May 10—Strength of the Bricker administration in the house may get its severest test today when members vote on a bill to reduce the 65 percent majority vote for special levies on real estate as a means of raising relief matching money.

House leaders were confident that a majority of the Republican-controlled house would favor the measure, but they were not so sure the emergency clause would carry.

If the emergency clause, which would make the bill effective immediately after passage, is defeated, it would mean a special election on levies, while if the members favor the clause a vote on levies could be held at the primary Aug. 8.

$20,000 Item Stressed

It will be pointed out on the floor that a special election would necessitate the expenditure of about $20,000, the house leadership said, and that the emergency provision would save such an expense.

The bill would limit the levy to one and one-half mills and provide a majority vote in 1939, a 55 percent vote in 1940 and reversion to the 65 percent majority in 1941.

Meanwhile, the house finance committee planned to vote today on an amendment to the general appropriation bill which would slice nearly three percent from the personal service item in the budget as a means of providing $500,000 additional for relief.

The possibility was seen that layoffs and payless vacations might result and that between 250 and 300 persons would lose their state jobs.

The appropriation bill was re-submitted to the finance committee to allow the cut to be made and will be back in the house for a vote Friday, Republican Majority Leader J. Harry McGreager said.

Ballard Move Fails

Rep. Paul Ballard (R-Jackson) attempted to prevent the state from paying $2,000,000 for the biennium to the public employees retirement fund by introducing an amendment deleting it from the budget, but the move failed.

The committee voted in favor of the amendment, then adopted an amendment setting up the fund in a separate account.

"My amendment will be offered on the floor of the house," Ballard said. "These state employees have been protected all through the depression and it's time we started thinking more about indigent persons."

The administration section of the poor relief bill was sent to the house welfare committee immediately after its introduction yesterday and will be ready for a vote when the financial section is added.

A bill setting up an Ohio River valley sanitation commission to cooperate with seven other states in ridding rivers of pollution was recommended for passage by the house judiciary committee.

Another measure preventing the department of health from regulating drainage from coal mines also was reported out by the committee.

It was opposition to the regulation of such drainage which held up the sanitation commission bill in the senate. It finally was approved by the upper house.

The administration suffered a setback when the house tabled a bill to regulate the jurisdiction of courts in issuing injunctions arising from labor disputes and labor received a slap when a motion to relieve the judiciary committee of a bill patterned after the Norris-LaGuardia injunction act failed to carry.

Commission Set Up

The senate approved a bill creating a seven member commission for state planning and research, and Sen. Leo Ascherman (R-Cleveland) its author, also introduced one making it a crime for anyone to wear uniforms representative of any foreign military organization.

Approval of the measure would mean that no so-called subversive groups could appear in uniforms.

There are too many Irish cows on the roads at night, motorists in Eire claim. They want the bossies to be outlined in lights, so they may readily be seen.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

America's most illustrious motive, the "J. W. Bowker," ran under its own power for the first time in years when Cecil Be De Mille succeeded in borrowing it for his new epic of the early railroads, "Union Pacific," opening locally next Sunday at the Cliftona theatre. Brought to the Paramount lot for the occasion, it attracted almost as much attention as the stars of the production, Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea.

tion as the stars of the production, Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea.

Built in 1875 to serve the Comstock Lode country and owned by the Railways and Locomotive Historical Society since 1937, the wide-stacked woodburner was completely reconditioned by Paramount to meet Interstate Commerce Commission requirements.

The "Bowker," known and loved by all railway enthusiasts, was built in 1875 for the Virginia and Truckee Railway. It was purchased in 1896 by the Hobart Estate Company and operated at Hobart Mills, Calif. Presented by the Hobart Estate Company in 1937 to the Pacific Coast Chapter, Railways and Locomotive Historical Society, it has since become famous as the most illustrious survivor of a by-gone day in railroading.

AT THE GRAND

With most folks shunning the number 13 to the extent that skyscraper landlords number that floor 12B in order to make it rentable, Tyrone Power has picked on it for his lucky number.

No sevens for Tyrone since he started work on his thirteenth picture, "Rose of Washington Square," 20th Century-Fox production in which he is starred with Alice Faye and Al Jolson.

Shortly after shooting began on the film, which opens Sunday at the Grand theatre, Tyrone was crowned "King of the Movies" in a nationwide newspaper poll.

Granted a lease on a South Pacific island for a vacation home. Awarded the coveted co-star role opposite Sonja Henie in her next production.

Notified that his last three pictures—"In Old Chicago," "Alexander's Ragtime Band" and "Jesse James"—have been more popular at the world's boxoffices than any other three pictures made by a single Hollywood star.

MAGICAL CORNCOBS

THE magic of our new chemistry finds even more fields to conquer. Now it is working in the cornfield. And not on the ears of corn, or the stalks, both of which have already been pretty well exploited, but on the cobs.

The humble corncob, formerly of no use except for kindling fires or making pipes, is found, like some other waste grain products, to be rich in a chemical called furturaldehyde. That substance is valuable for synthetic resins from which modern industry makes lacquer, varnish, phonograph records, flexible glass and many other products.

The lover of corncob pipes may regret this diversion of cobs to chemical vats and laboratory processes. But out of the ultimate products may come a pipe better than any that Nature produces. Our modern industry is full of such freakish changes.

Henry Ford and other modern industrialists have evidently been right in going to the farm for raw materials. There seems to be scarcely anything in the form of agricultural waste that cannot be put now to industrial use. As our ore mines play out, we can mine the farms. A new age of agriculture is beginning. We may soon see chemical laboratories and factories spreading through the farming regions to handle their products.

SELASSIE AT BATH

MR. Tafari Makonnen, resident of Bath, England, is said to be a sorrowful man. Only three years ago he was an Emperor, known as Haile Selassie, Conquering Lion of Judah. His kingdom was the little country of Ethiopia.

The other day this exile observed the third anniversary of his flight from Addis Ababa. It was not a festive occasion. The ex-emperor spent the day in fasting and prayer for the restoration of his country. His hopes are slimmer than ever. Once he made a great plea for help to the League of Nations. The League answered by freeing its members to recognize the Italian conquest.

At Bath, however, Selassie may look upon some interesting ruins, left from the days of the Roman conquest of those little islands. He may feel a little comforted by the historical fact that the Roman legions eventually pulled out of Britain. He will hope that his country may outlast the Italian regime.

That non-aggression idea's pretty good for individuals, too.

Water carriers of interstate freight between this country's two oceans, the Canada line and the Rio Grande or the Gulf of Mexico are not one bit enthusiastic over the scheme to put regulation of all our forms of transportation under the jurisdiction of a single federal body—the Interstate Commerce Commission or some similar group, to be created in place of the commission. Neither do the auto-truck operators like the idea—not unless they're subsidiaries of some one of our big railroad systems. In fact, these independents are violently opposed to the whole notion. The railroads, however, warmly favor it. It looks good likewise to holders of railroad securities—notably our great insurance concerns. They're a potent influence, too, with rail investments running away up into the billions. And look at the number of their policy holders! Incidentally the general public is vitally concerned, since it ultimately pays the bill for freight carriage—passenger fares also. I don't think the general public understands the subject very well, though—it's extremely complicated.

Chairman Burton K. Wheeler's senate committee on interstate commerce, as we know, has been investigating the situation for some time. Of late it's been listening to expert witnesses. Said witnesses disagree vehemently—accordingly as they are, on the one hand railroad owners or creditors; on the other, water carriers or truckmen.

BACK INTO HISTORY

It requires a glance into rather ancient history to get the point of the controversy between them. Back in an almost pre-historic era, when we had no railroads to speak of except part of the way westward across the continent, we did have a little inland transportation. Boats chug-chugged up and down the Ohio, Mississippi and Missouri rivers. I can remember when there was quite some shipping on the Big Muddy. Such streams weren't improved. Boats ran on bars, were torn by snags and had all kinds of trouble, but they did their damndest. Then the railroads broke in and knocked the props from under that primitive system. But the rails were frightfully greedy. They were efficient but they got themselves hated. They likewise enormously overbid their various capitalizations. Folks began saying, "We must re-develop our inland waterways, to counteract such brigandage." It was a slow job, but progress was made with it gradually. Channels were dredged out; river navigation began to be a serious railroad menace. Thus quite a crimp was thrown into the railroads. Then the auto made its appearance. It wasn't a serious railroad worry at first, for there were no inter-city highways to mention, but now we have them everywhere. I don't know how much cheaper the auto is than the railroad for freight shipments, for I'm not a freight shipper, but I do know that it's about one-half cheaper (though not as comfortable) as rail passenger transportation. Another railroad crimp!

RAILROADS MISTREATED?

Now, the railroads maintain that they've been mistreated. They represent that they built their lines, which were vastly costly. The water carriers didn't build their waterways. Their waterways have been scooped out and developed, but essentially they were a gift of nature—not avenues that the public had to pay for. As for automotive roads?—the public footed the bill—and the buses aren't entitled to use them "free gratis for nothing."

Nub: If the railroads want relief, they can't get it by a reduction in their own rates; they've got to get it by an increase in the rates of the water carriers' and the truckers' charges. That's why they want a new interstate commerce commission. As a consumer: "Do you like the proposition?" It'll help the railroads.

LINDBERGH POLITE

WASHINGTON—A congressional delegation headed by Nevada's beefy Senator Pat McCarran got short shrift from Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh on his boat trip down the Potomac to inspect the Army's great air research station at Langley Field, Va. On the other hand, Lindbergh was surprisingly friendly to photographers.

At the dock he posed amiably for pictures and when his cousin, Chairman "Jerry" Land of the U. S. Maritime Commission, began shooting them away by waving a suitcase menacingly at them, Lindbergh chided: "Be careful, you're liable to hurt one of them."

Land acted as chaperon for the Lone Eagle and kept everybody away except a small group of close friends. This was a great disappointment to McCarran and his committee, who had hoped to bask in Lindbergh's limelight.

Every time he appeared on deck Congressmen clustered around like a crowd of autograph hunters, but he paid no more attention than other strangers. Land, who arranged the seating at Lindbergh's table, excluded the congressional group.

The only guests seated at the flyer's table were Admiral Land. Lauren D. ("Deke") Lyman, New York reporter who scooped the world on Lindbergh's sudden departure to England in 1935; and C. B. Allen, another former New York newspaperman who is now an official of the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Lindbergh was in high spirits during the luncheon and related a number of experiences of his European aerial survey last year. One was a story he heard in Germany about the British balloon defense to protect London from aerial attack. Occasionally these balloons break away from their moorings, and some have been recovered in Germany.

"The Germans got a big laugh out of that," Lindbergh said. "The told me that the next time it happened they would hitch the balloon to a zeppelin and return it to London."

At Langley Field, Lindbergh displayed greatest interest in the wind tunnel, largest in the world. After watching a miniature plane, manned by a marionette pilot, being buffeted about for a while, he remarked jocularly, "That boy needs a little more time on the ground before he solos."

POLISH DILEMMA

Ironie tragedy of the Poles' present position is that they have only themselves to blame. By helping carve up Czechoslovakia last October they opened the door to their own downfall.

The headlines don't tell the whole story, for what the Poles are afraid of is not the capture of Danzig alone, but Hitler's encircling movement. This fear grew into a stabbing pain after Hitler swallowed the remainder of Czechoslovakia last March. Prior to that, Poland had looked

Great Advances Made in Study of "Organ"

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Forty years ago we thought we knew all about the blood, all but a few little things.

Then about 15 years ago a new field of research opened up. Today I believe there is more good research being done on the blood than in any other field in medicine.

At the meeting of the American College of Physicians in New Orleans in March, I noticed marked attention in the papers as well as in the exhibits to this subject.

The blood is the easiest of the internal "organs" to examine. And one has to consider the blood as an organ, or rather, a system. Suppose

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

We could, without harm or pain to the individual, take out a part of the heart muscle and examine it under the microscope, or part of the kidneys, or the liver—think what an advantage we would have in knowing whether the organ is normal or not!

Do It with Blood

But we have always been able to do that with the blood—ever since we had microscopes, at least. Ever since, in fact, a thin little German professor, Viorodt, stuck a needle in his own finger, obtained a drop of blood and looked at it under the "scope."

He saw three kinds of cells. The most numerous by far were the red cells. These are the oxygen carriers, the exchange or liaison officers of the body's army.

They are, to make a brand-new, up-to-date simile, like the diplomats who keep scurrying around Europe nowadays. One comes from France to England with some information, leaves it in England, gets some other (English) kind of information, and goes hurrying back to France to give it up there.

The red blood cells get some oxygen from the lungs, go scurrying to the liver with it, feed it to the liver cells, take in exchange some of the dirt (carbon dioxide) they have to get rid of, and go back to the lungs with it, giving it up to be exhaled in the breath.

Constant in Health

The red cells are remarkably constant in health in all sorts of individuals. In fact, we know the German professor was thin and little because he examined the blood of a number of robust peoples and a number of fat ladies, and he was astonished to find that the proportionate number of red cells in all was the same as his, in spite of the fact that he so thin "und mager (hungry-looking) bin."

The second type of cells which he saw were the white cells, which look like the unicellular animals, such as amoebae that are so beautifully pictured photographically in Professor Buckbaum's new book, Animals Without Backbones.

The third type of blood cell is the platelet. It has to do with the clotting of the blood.

Their Origin

It was wondered for a long time where these cells came from. They gorge the blood vessels, are lost in hemorrhage and die off, but still new ones come along to take their place. Whence do they come? It was finally determined that they came from the marrow of the bones. That is the manufacturing center for blood cells.

One of the new procedures which are the result of the research I mentioned is to take a piece of bone marrow out of a patient and examine it. It is a neat little operation that is practically painless and consists in sticking a hollow needle into the center of the breast bone. It may seem frightening but it yields great and new funds of information for the diagnosis and treatment of these conditions.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

E. H.: "Almost every night after going to sleep I lay in bed and the perspiration just pours out of me. Doctors tell me that they are the night sweats. I do not cough or spit."

Answer—Night sweats occur in tuberculosis and in any kind of infection. They are also caused by an upset nervous system due to excessive use of alcohol or emotional strain. In any case, I think a physical examination by a doctor is in order.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diets," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

ELEANOR HAD not had her clothes off in two days and a night.

The doctor said: "Mrs. Parrish, we cannot afford to have another patient. You must take a bromide and get some sleep. We're doing all we can for your little girl, and we do not expect the worst. In any event, we cannot expect a crisis for another day."

She permitted herself to be put to sleep.

It was Alida who received the telegram that arrived at the same time.

She opened the first and saw that it was from Phil to say that weather conditions did not permit his flying up; he was arriving by the first train.

The second telegram she put on a silver tray on a hall table, where it lay unopened during those harrowing days and nights that the Parrishes spent at the side of their first-born. Later Annie picked it up and put it on Eleanor's desk.

It was as if steel bands held tight around Eleanor's heart and held her up physically. But she broke when the crisis was over and her child lay sleeping peacefully and they knew she would live.

"It was my fault, Phil," Eleanor cried. "Somehow I could have prevented it. I always knew I was a bad wife, but I thought I was a good mother. I'm never going to write again. I'm so happy to have her—and you—I never want anything else. I was so worried about you."

"About me?"

"And that woman. I was terrified that you'd have an accident flying up."

"What woman?"

"Mrs. Lodge."

Phil laughed. "I wasn't going to fly up with her, baby."

"But you did see a lot of her, Phil."

"Of course I did. And we're going to have her here to dinner when things are all right again. She's pretty dull, as a person, Nell, but she has a kind of salon in New York and always has a lot of critics and picture and stage people around and I thought it would be a good idea to cultivate her friendship. Thought she might be able to do some good for you."

Eleanor's eyes widened. "You were doing that for me?"

"Of course," he said simply. "And I don't want to hear any more of this talk about not writing any more. You have to write, Nell. It's part of you, and I want you to work because it is necessary for you. How about the prize book?"

She nodded. "I haven't thought of it for weeks."

It was true that she had not. It had marked a high point of hope in her life, but she had scaled a higher point during the illness of her child.

For the first time in nearly five years there was no story clamoring to be written in Eleanor Parrish's mind. She was content during May days to devote herself with fanatical attention to Jessica.

She dismissed the trained nurse as soon as the doctor would permit her to do so. She bathed and dressed in a wasted little form, and cooked nourishing soups and puddings with her own hands, played tirelessly at the games that Jessica wanted to play. She read and wrote stories to bring laughter to the pale little face, and grieved that their finances would not permit a long stay in tropical sunshine.

The dust and the letters and telegrams gathered on her desk. When the mail arrived in the morning it was at an hour when Jessica was being prepared for the day and Eleanor glanced over it hastily and with little interest.

There was a mystifying letter from Kate Douglas, who was spending the spring in Wisconsin. Kate wrote:

"This is the hastiest of notes (written as I am about to embark on my first flight) to congratulate you both from the bottom of my heart. I know that this is one more thing that you both have shared and from this great things will come. My best love to my four favorite people."

Eleanor said: "Kate is being incoherent, but she is so fond of Jessica it was probably the best she could do."

"It is a funny letter," Phil agreed. "Speaking of trips, I think we could manage to take a cottage somewhere further out on the Island this summer. I could stay here and get out week-ends. I'd like to get Jessica out where she could get the kind of sunshine you only get at beaches."

"Couldn't you get away?" Eleanor pleaded. "We could all be together. Besides, Jessica is not happy when she is away from you."

Phil shook his head. "I can't get a vacation until winter. The sports season is just opening up and you know what that means. We'll have to find something inexpensive, honey. Our money is short and we owe a lot of bills. I'll get a raise next year and things will be better. We can start saving when we get out of debt. If I could only lay my hands on a few thousand dollars . . . but, I don't want any more debts."

Eleanor thought about that. She thought about a story that she had meant to write if she had any luck with her prize novel. Her second

FORTY years ago we thought we knew all about the blood, all but a few little things.

Then about 15 years ago a new field of research opened up. Today I believe there is more good research being done on the blood than in any other field in medicine.

At the meeting of the American College of Physicians in New Orleans in March, I noticed marked attention in the papers as well as in the exhibits to this subject.

The blood is the easiest of the internal "organs" to examine. And one has to consider the blood as an organ, or rather, a system. Suppose

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

We could, without harm or pain to the individual, take out a part of the heart muscle and examine it under the microscope, or part of the kidneys, or the liver—think what an advantage we would have in knowing whether the organ is normal or not!

Do It With Blood

But we have always been able to do that with the blood—ever since we had microscopes, at least. Ever since, in fact, a thin little German professor, Virchow, stuck a needle in his own finger, obtained a drop of blood and looked at it under the microscope.

He saw three kinds of cells. The most numerous by far were the red cells. These are the oxygen carriers, the exchange or liaison officers of the body's army.

They are, to make a brand-new, up-to-date simile, like the diplomats who keep scurrying around Europe nowadays. One comes from France to England with some information, leaves it in England, gets some other (English) kind of information, and goes hurrying back to France to give it up there.

The red blood cells get some oxygen from the lungs, go scurrying to the liver with it, feed it to the liver cells, take in exchange some of the dirt (carbon dioxide) they have to get rid of, and go back to the lungs with it, giving it up to be exhaled in the breath.

Constant in Health

The red cells are remarkably constant in health in all sorts of individuals. In fact, we know the German professor was thin and little because he examined the blood of a number of robust peoples and a number of fat ladies, and he was astonished to find that the proportionate number of red cells in all was the same as his, in spite of the fact that he so thin "and mager (hungry-looking) bin."

The second type of cells which he saw were the white cells, which look like the unicellular animals, such as amoebae that are so beautifully pictured photographically in Professor Buckbaum's new book, Animals Without Backbone.

The third type of blood cell is the platelet. It has to do with the clotting of the blood.

Their Origin

It was wondered for a long time where these cells came from. They gorge the blood vessels, are lost in hemorrhage and die off, but still new ones come along to take their place. Whence do they come? It was finally determined that they came from the marrow of the bones. That is the manufacturing center for blood cells.

One of the new procedures which are the result of the research I mentioned is to take a piece of bone marrow out of a patient and examine it. It is a neat little operation that is practically painless and consists in sticking a hollow needle into the center of the breast bone. It may seem frightening but it yields great and new funds of information for the diagnosis and treatment of these conditions.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

E. H.: "Almost every night after going to sleep I lay in bed and the perspiration just pours out of me. Doctors tell me that they are the night sweats. I do not cough or spit."

Answer—Night sweats occur in tuberculosis and in any kind of infection. They are also caused by an upset nervous system due to excessive use of alcohol or emotional strain. In any case, I think a physical examination by a doctor is in order.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

ELEANOR HAD not had her clothes off in two days and a night. The doctor said: "Mrs. Parrish, we cannot afford to have another patient. You must take a bromide and get some sleep. We're doing all we can for your little girl, and we do not expect the worst. In any event, we cannot expect a crisis for another day."

She permitted herself to be put to sleep. It was Alida who received the telegram that arrived at the same time. She opened the first and saw that it was from Phil to say that weather conditions did not permit his flying up; he was arriving by the first train.

The second telegram she put on a silver tray on a hall table, where it lay unopened during those harrowing days and nights that the Parrishes spent at the side of their first-born. Later Annie picked it up and put it on Eleanor's desk.

It was as if steel bands held tight around Eleanor's heart and held her up physically. But she broke when the crisis was over and her child lay sleeping peacefully and they knew she would live.

"It was my fault, Phil," Eleanor cried. "Somehow I could have prevented it. I always knew I was a bad wife, but I thought I was a good mother. I'm never going to write again. I'm so happy to have her—and you—I never want anything else. I was so worried about you."

"About me?" "And that woman. I was terrified that you would have an accident flying up."

"What woman?" "Mrs. Lodge."

Phil laughed. "I wasn't going to fly up with her, baby."

"But you did see a lot of her, Phil."

"Of course I did. And we're going to have her here to dinner when things are all right again. She's pretty dull, as a person, Nell, but she has a kind of salon in New York and always has a lot of critics and picture and stage people around and I thought it would be a good idea to cultivate her friendship. Thought she might be able to do some good for you."

Eleanor's eyes widened. "You were doing that for me?" "Of course," he said simply.

"And I don't want to hear any more of this talk about not writing any more. You have to write, Nell. It's part of you, and I want you to work because it is necessary for you. How about the prize book?"

She nodded. "I haven't thought of it for weeks."

It was true that she had not. It had marked a high point of hope in her life, but she had scaled a higher point during the illness of her child.

For the first time in nearly five years there was no story clamoring to be written in Eleanor Parrish's mind. She was content during May days to devote herself with fanatical attention to Jessica.

She dismissed the trained nurse as soon as the doctor would permit her to do so. She bathed and dressed the wasted little form, cooked nourishing soups and puddings with her own hands, played tirelessly at the games that Jessica wanted to play. She read and wrote stories to bring laughter to the pale little face, and grieved that their finances would not permit a long stay in tropical sunshine.

The dust and the letters and telegrams gathered on her desk. When the mail arrived in the morning it was at an hour when Jessica was being prepared for the day and Eleanor glanced over it hastily and with little interest.

There was a mystifying letter from Kate Douglas, who was spending the spring in Wisconsin. Kate wrote:

"This is the happiest of notes (written as I am about to embark on my first flight) to congratulate you both from the bottom of my heart. I know that this is one more thing that you both have shared and from this great things will come. My best love to my four favorite people."

Eleanor said: "Kate is being incoherent, but she is so fond of Jessica it was probably the best she could do."

"It is a funny letter," Phil agreed. "Speaking of trips I think we could manage to take a cottage somewhere further out on the island this summer. I could stay here and get out week-ends. I'd like to get Jessica out where she could get the kind of sunshine you only get at beaches."

"Couldn't you get away?" Eleanor pleaded. "We could all be together. Besides, Jessica is not happy when she is away from you."

Phil shook his head. "I can't get a vacation until winter. The sports season is just opening up and you know what that means. We'll have to find something inexpensive, honey. Our money is short and we owe a lot of bills. I'll get a raise next year and things will be better. We can start saving when we get out of debt. If I could only lay my hands on a few thousand dollars . . . but, I don't want any more debts."

Eleanor thought about that. She thought about a story that she had meant to write if she had any luck with her prize novel. Her second story was far better in plot and characterization than any she ever had conceived, and she wanted to save it until she was recognized. But, only recently—a month or so before Jessica was taken ill—there had been a letter from Mr. Henderson of the McLeod Syndicate asking her if she had an available story. She'd get at least a thousand dollars for it and that thousand would pay for a summer holiday for Jessica.

She went into her "office" and sat down at the typewriter she had not used for nearly two months. She took off the cover and put a piece of paper in the machine. Her fingers were stiff and the words came slowly at first. Two hours later she had finished writing the synopsis.

She put it in an envelope and addressed it to Henderson.

The stack of letters and telegrams attracted her eye and she put them in a basket and took it back to the living room. Phil had a large following and many of the letters, she knew, were messages of hope and congratulations on Jessica's recovery.

She decided to read them and answer them with little notes after Jessica had had her supper and been put to bed for the night. Phil was not expected home until late.

He came in at midnight. Eleanor, looking very still, glanced at him from where she sat on the lounge, a basket of letters and telegrams beside her, a telegram in her hand.

He said: "Is something the matter, honey?"

She shook her head. "Only that I think maybe I've lost my mind. I've been waiting for you for five hours to tell me if I see what I think I do. Read this, Phil."

He took the telegram and read it aloud: "Mrs. Phillip Parrish, Hazelton Gardens Estate, Great Neck, Long Island, New York: We are happy to inform you that you have been awarded first prize in our contest for your novel, 'Descendants of Kings.' Nell! Baby, you've won the Senfell-Raye prize!"

"And I didn't even know it," she said in a small voice.

He said: "May I shake you hand, Mrs. Parrish? And may I say I always knew you could?"

"Oh, Phil!" she said, unable to say more until a few moments later. "One time it would have meant a personal triumph. Now it means that we all can go to Bermuda on a glorious holiday."

"You and the kids can go," he told her the next morning, "but I can't."

Eleanor smiled and made a note to engage reservations for four. (To Be Continued)

Dr. Otto Mees Addresses Luther League Banquet

Parents Guests Of Honor At Affair

Dr. Otto Mees, president of Capital university, Columbus, was guest speaker Tuesday for the annual Parent's Banquet of the Luther League of Trinity Lutheran church. Dr. Mees talked on the topic "Happiness" basing his remarks on an introduction of the book, "The Quest of the Four Leaf Clover". His interesting discussion was well received by the audience.

Miniature Maypoles with green and orchid streamers and vases of lilacs graced the centers of the small tables set in the parish house for the banquet. Large baskets of Spring flowers adorned the window recesses. Green and orchid runners were used on the tables where a three course dinner was served at 7 o'clock to 165 members and guests.

The after dinner program was opened by a welcome address by Ned Dresbach, president of the organization. He then turned the program over to Eugene Barthelmas, toastmaster for the evening. Miss Evelyn Young welcomed the parents and the response for the parents was given by Mrs. George Himrod. The song, "That Wonderful Mother of Mine", was sung by the group led by Rev. G. L. Troutman, song leader for the affair. A bulletin was read by Miss Roma Melvin, followed by group singing of the selection, "Mother".

The entertainment for the banquet was in charge of Miss Rosemary Schreiner, chairman of the Banquet weight group of the league. was in the home of Mrs. R. P. Reid, W. Corwin street. "Answering Children's Questions" was her subject, her talk being received with great interest by the 25 league members present. Mrs. Nelson was introduced by Mrs. J. E. Groom, program chairman. Mrs. Nelson said that children learn by asking questions and not to stifle their questions by showing annoyance. She stated that children acquire knowledge by the answers received to their questions. In refusing to buy toys for a child on a shopping trip, the question should be settled before leaving home by telling him that nothing is to be had downtown, then he will not expect it.

Mrs. Nelson advised the members to answer just as much as children ask for, and no more, as their minds can assimilate only so much. She said that a story should be made simple and natural, in answer to their questions.

During the business session, plans were discussed for the benefit card party which will be Thursday, May 25, at the Elks Home.

Mrs. F. K. Blair is chairman of the general committee which includes Mrs. Ralph Wallace, Mrs. John W. Eshelman and Mrs. Karl Mason.

Senior Play At Pickaway

"Early To Bed, Early To Rise", will be presented by the Pickaway Senior class in the school auditorium under the direction of Miss Mildred Wertman Friday, May 12, at 8:15 o'clock.

The action for the play takes place in the combination living and dining-room of the Fuller apartment on the Chicago south side. When the play opens the members of the family are struggling in for a Sunday morning breakfast. Aunt Abbie is frantic, trying to be cook, mother, and general "cleaner upper" for the group. Dad is busy with his inventions — an unbreakable egg crate, a keyless lock, and an automatic chicken picker. Bobby, who hates study and "loves automobiles", is being pushed into marriage by the eighteen-year-old Spanky who already considers herself an old maid. Marion Fuller, the older sister, is trying hard to make a success of her job, but is hopelessly in love with her boss, Jim Griggs. Patsy is "in love" with all animal pets and has struck up a staunch friendship with the owner of the pet shop, Otto Kirschmeier.

Life becomes very complex for the little group when Patsy is notified by the Graphic that she holds the lucky ticket for a model home, the Cinderella House. She is ready to move her entire family, Mr. Kirschmeier, pets, and all, out to their much needed home in the country when — something happens. Marion also encounters unforeseen competition for the affection of her boss. The owner of the pet shop is about to lose his shop because he can not pay his rent. —Then Patsy begins to plan for her family.

Dr. Otto Mees Addresses Luther League Banquet

Parents Guests Of Honor At Affair

Dr. Otto Mees, president of Capital university, Columbus, was guest speaker Tuesday for the annual Parent's Banquet of the Luther League of Trinity Lutheran church. Dr. Mees talked on the topic "Happiness" basing his remarks on an introduction of the book, "The Quest of the Four Leaf Clover". His interesting discussion was well received by the audience.

Miniature Maypoles with green and orchid streamers and vases of lilacs graced the centers of the small tables set in the parish house for the banquet. Large baskets of Spring flowers adorned the window recesses. Green and orchid runners were used on the tables where a three course dinner was served at 7 o'clock to 165 members and guests.

The after dinner program was opened by a welcome address by Ned Dresbach, president of the organization. He then turned the program over to Eugene Barthelmas, toastmaster for the evening. Miss Evelyn Young welcomed the parents and the response for the parents was given by Mrs. George Himrod. The song, "That Wonderful Mother of Mine", was sung by the group led by Rev. G. L. At the close of the dance, the group gathered around Miss Rosemary Schreiner, who sang, "Love is so Sweet in the Springtime". Miss Elizabeth Hoffman played the piano accompaniment.

The play, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" was then presented. Miss Norma Jean Wolf serving as reader. The cast of characters included Robert May, king; Miss Jane Colville, queen; Miss Jean List, princess; Miss Mary Schreiner, witch; Donald Walters, Jimmy Mowery, Raymond Francis, Stocklan Shaffer, Robert Melvin, William Goeller and Vernon Well-er, the seven dwarfs.

After the program hour, the group presented Ned Dresbach a gift in recognition of his untiring efforts in building up the league. The meeting closed with the group singing "Silver Threads Among the Gold".

was in the home of Mrs. R. P. Reid, W. Corwin street. "Answering Children's Questions" was her subject, her talk being received with great interest by the 25 league members present. Mrs. Nelson was introduced by Mrs. J. E. Groom, program chairman. Mrs. Nelson said that children learn by asking questions and not to stifle their questions by showing annoyance. She stated that children acquire knowledge by the answers received to their questions. In refusing to buy toys for a child on a shopping trip, the question should be settled before leaving home by telling him that nothing is to be had downtown, then he will not expect it.

Mrs. Nelson advised the members to answer just as much as children ask for, and no more, as their minds can assimilate only so much. She said that a story should be made simple and natural, in answer to their questions.

During the business session, plans were discussed for the benefit card party which will be Thursday, May 25, at the Elks Home.

Mrs. F. K. Blair is chairman of the general committee which includes Mrs. Ralph Wallace, Mrs. John W. Eshelman and Mrs. Karl Mason.

Senior Play At Pickaway
"Early To Bed, Early To Rise", will be presented by the Pickaway Senior class in the school auditorium under the direction of Miss Mildred Wertman Friday, May 12, at 8:15 o'clock.

The action for the play takes place in the combination living and dining-room of the Fuller apartment on the Chicago south side. When the play opens the members of the family are struggling in for a Sunday morning relay breakfast. Aunt Abbie is frantic, trying to be cook, mother, and general "cleaner upper" for the group. Dad is busy with his inventions — an unbreakable egg crate, a keyless lock, and an automatic chicken picker. Bobby, who hates study and "loves automobiles", is being pushed into marriage by the eighteen-year-old Spanky who already considers herself an old maid. Marion Fuller, the older sister, is trying hard to make a success of her job, but is hopelessly in love with her boss, Jim Griggs. Patsy is "in love" with all animal pets and has struck up a staunch friendship with the owner of the pet shop, Otto Kirschmeier.

Life becomes very complex for the little group when Patsy is notified by the Graphic that she holds the lucky ticket for a model home, the Cinderella House. She is ready to move her entire family, Mr. Kirschmeier, pets, and all, out to their much needed home in the country when — something happens. Marion also encounters unforeseen competition for the affection of her boss. The owner of the pet shop is about to lose his shop because he can not pay his rent. —Then Patsy begins to plan for her family.

The cast of characters is as follows: Abbie Fuller, the frantic aunt, Mary Jane Kreisel; Bobby Fuller, the car-mad brother, Junior Dresbach; Marion Fuller, who is trying hard to succeed, Doris Leist; Everett Fuller, the impractical father, James Boggs; Spanky Minuti, the tom-boy sweetheart, Marvene Newhouse; Jim Griggs, a handsome young business man, Robert Betts; Patsy Fuller, the little sister who loves animals pets, Fannie Mae Duleson; Daisy Fairfax, the "Cinderella House" editor, Maxine Dreisbach; Molly Thatcher, a reporter on the Graphic, Bernice Ward; Otto Kirschmeier, the kindly keeper of the pet shop, Richard Penn; Laura Montgomery, the girl from the south, Ida Carroll; and Mr. Stevens, another worried rent collector, Donald Goodman.

Dodgers To Set Record At Gate

By Pat Robinson

NEW YORK, May 10 — If the Dodgers can maintain even a fifty-fifty gait throughout the season, they probably will outdraw the Giants at home and may even surpass the world champion Yankees. Despite poor weather, the Dodgers have drawn more than 200,000 in their 14 games at home and at that rate would go well over 1,000,000 for their 77 home games through the season.

The Dodgers front office expects the club to draw 1,250,000 and this forecast may not be far wrong for seven night games alone probably will pull more than 200,000 through the turnstiles.

How well the club will draw on the road will depend a great deal on its standing during their tours through the interland. If the Dodgers remain up in the race and if the other National league clubs continue to pin one another's ears back as they have been doing, the Brooklyn entry may conceivably set a new attendance record for the league.

However, they'll have to improve on their performance of yesterday when the Cardinals bowled them over, 13 to 1. Ray Blades' club seems to be improving at it goes along. His infield might be a little steadier and he could use a little more power behind the plate, but otherwise his outfit is good enough to be a consistent contender in a circuit that appears so evenly balanced.

Terrymen Sink
Five Giant throwers were not enough to stop the Cubs and as a result of an 11-7 shellacking the Terrymen are now only a half game out of last place. Despite their victory, the Cubs still appear to be floundering and it may take some time before Gabby Hartnett get them hitting on all cylinders.

The Reds still look like the best bet to cop the pennant. They have plenty of pitching and more power than any other team in the league and it is hard to see how any of the others are going to head them off. They knocked over the Phils, 8-4, on a pair of homers by Wally Berger and another by Frank McCormick, who seems headed for another big year.

The Pirates were rained out at Boston as were the Senators at Cleveland and the Athletics at Detroit.

The Red Sox held on to their place at the top of the American league by trimming the Browns, 10-8, in 10 innings. Ted Williams' homer with two aboard was the deciding wallop although he would have had no chance to make it had not Jimmy Foxx also hit one with two aboard earlier in the game.

The Brownies would seem to have a good suit for non-support against their own pitchers. They have scored 53 runs or a little more than six runs per game in the nine contests they have lost but unfortunately for them, the Brownie pitchers have allowed the opposition exactly 83 runs.

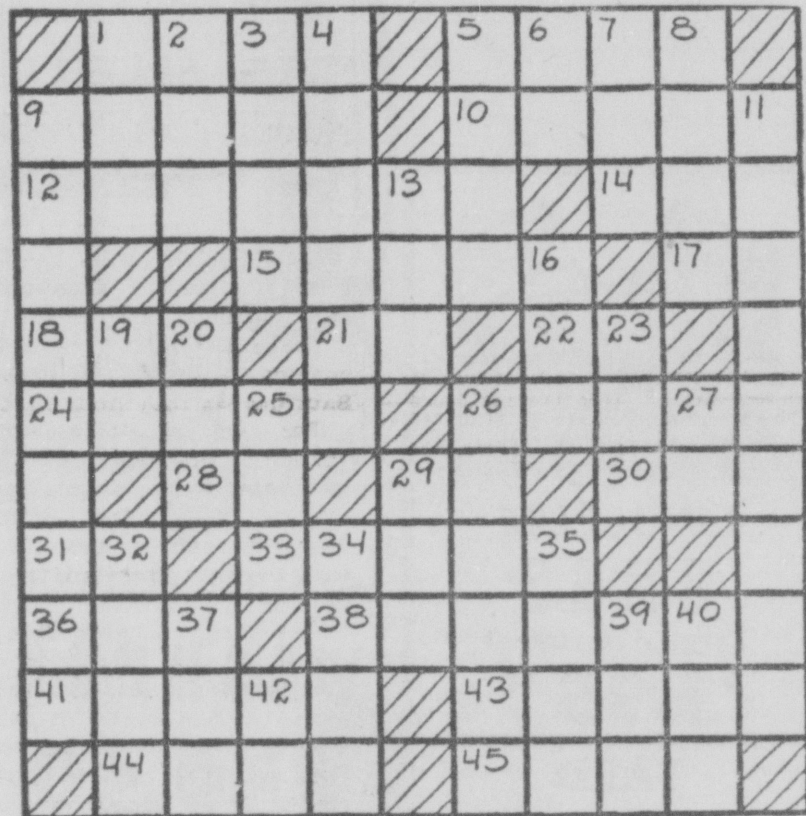

The Yanks clung to the Red Sox heels by taking over the White Sox 8-6.

EARTHQUAKE NOTED

MOBILE, Ala., May 8—An earth tremor was recorded on the seismograph at Spring Hill college last night. Father A. J. Westland reported today. He estimated the tremor was about 4,000 miles away, probably easterly in the direction of the Azores.

We'll never understand women. The first really swell day of Spring and she thinks it high time we tidied up the basement!

Over 300 Enjoy Big Scout Fete

Father And Son Banquet Served To Large Throng In Memorial Hall; Address Heard

About 325 "boys" enjoyed the first annual Father and Son banquet of the Pickaway district, Boy Scouts, held Tuesday night in Memorial Hall.

In addition to a free three-course dinner, they were entertained with accordion and piano music by Hilaire Haecker, an interesting address by Robert Heistand, chief executive of the Central Ohio Area Council, and an investiture ceremony conducted by Troop 107 of the Methodist church.

Heistand, in an informal address with numerous jokes, urged boys to take part in the Scout program and appealed to their fathers to assist in promoting scouting in the Pickaway district. In addition to Scouts and their fathers, prospective Scouts and their fathers attended the meeting.

All Boys Have Gifts

"Every boy is endowed with certain gifts," Mr. Heistand said. "Scouting gives boys an opportunity to explore, to achieve a goal. On the Scout reservations we can select the boys who will be craftsmen, salesmen, idealists, etc. Boys who take things too easy are shallow. They are the type who fall on a cushioned davenport when they get home. To Scouts every day is a glorious adventure. They carry that same spirit into manhood."

"The hardest thing for a boy to say is the word 'no.' It takes courage to say that word when others are urging you to do something wrong. Be true to yourself and you will be false to no one. Get what you can honestly, by your own effort and with the tools available. We like to have Scouts team up with God."

PICKAWAY HAS PLAN COMPLETE FOR YEAR END

All closing activities at Pickaway Township School have been planned. The public is cordially invited to attend all exercises.

The Baccalaureate sermon will be delivered on Sunday evening, May 21, at 8:15 o'clock, by the Rev. Robert Kelsey of the Presbyterian Church in Circleville.

There will be no school on Monday, May 22. This day will be used by teachers to make out reports and grade cards.

On Tuesday, May 23, buses will bring children to the school at 10 a. m., to be followed by a picnic dinner, in which each family will make its own arrangements. In the afternoon at 1:30 recreation ball will be played.

Children will assemble in their home-rooms at 3 o'clock to receive report cards and be dismissed to go home.

The Commencement exercises on Wednesday at 8:15, will complete the school activities. The Rev. Charles E. Turley, D. D., superintendent of the Wilmington district of the Ohio Methodist church, will deliver the address.

He has an outstanding record of accomplishments. He has held pastorates in Columbus, Marion and Dayton and was Chaplain in the World's War, being stationed at Camp Sherman.

He is a graduate of Ohio Northern University, being granted the Divinity Degree in 1924. He is also a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan university.

He has specialized in young people's work, having taught in Epworth League Institutes in several states.

His subject will be "Our Big World and Others."
